

Seth Collins is a 17 year old high school senior who attends New Orleans Center for Creative Arts. He began studying piano at the age of five and continued studying classical music until he reached 10th grade. The summer before his sophomore year he decided to study a different genre of music under Micheal Peller. He fell in love with jazz and felt like he had found his voice. He attended NOCCA the following fall and has continued to grow as a musician, student, and support to his peers. One of his favorite aspects of jazz are performing in a trio setting.

Seth plans to attend college in the fall to study jazz piano performance and minor in sound engineering.

He hopes to have a career that includes touring with a trio, recording projects, and teaching.